Electrical Counterfeits Kill

Every day, counterfeit electrical products from Asia are finding their way into family homes. Fake light bulbs, extension cords, batteries, circuit breaker switches and car-jumper cables are just some of the unsafe-imitation electrical goods. These sub-standard items cause fires and kill people.

According to the Electrical Safety Foundation International the amount of fake or imitation electrical goods has reached a crisis stage in America. Counterfeit purchases total 22% nationwide. With so few port of entry inspectors, the whole nation stands at risk.

Here are a few tips to avoid buying counterfeit goods:

1. buy only at reputable stores
2. bargain prices may mean counterfeit products
3. check the warning label for spelling errors
4. don't buy no-name products.

Respectfully,

William C. Faber, Jr.
